

Initiating the Conversation

How does one kick off a conversation with a computer?

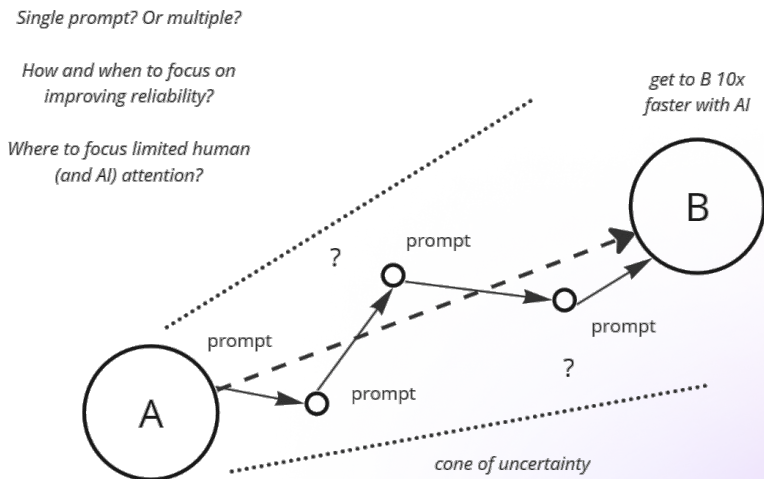

Key Ingredients

1. Your goal
2. Context
3. A persona
4. Instructions
5. Examples
6. A “hyper-growth mindset”
7. Prompts to s(t)imulate reasoning (optional)

Your goal

“Point B” — or the general direction

Contextual Information

What are the pertinent facts? And remember, more is more!

Persona

“You are an expert X with an IQ of 120...”

Instructions

Clear direction, key definitions, and/or valuable
(and ideally proprietary) heuristics

Gold standard examples

High-quality, diverse data is key! 3–5 examples is ideal. Don't use if you're not sure it's "high quality."

“Hyper-growth mindset”

Ambitious goal (point B) + radical humility, especially if you're an expert

Prompts to s(t)imulate reasoning

- Your comprehensive feedback
- “Reflect critically upon your answer and find room for improvement”
- “Let’s take a big breath and think this through step-by-step to get to the right answer...”
- “Ask me clarifying questions until you’re satisfied”

(Note, however, that these will be commoditized)
